Speech That Works $150.00

Speech That Works makes speech development more exciting for young children with a hearing loss while still providing short, repeated practice sessions in minimum time. Speech That Works also facilitates the acquisition of speech skills in children with apraxia, dysarthria and other motor speech difficulties.

Speech That Works promotes communication between caregivers — parents, teachers, speech-language pathologists, auditory-verbal therapists, oral motor therapists. Each adult quickly sees the child's speech targets and how well the child has done with others. It is a means for documenting services and planning lessons. With children who are just beginning a formal approach, the program suggests activities using real toys.

What's included?

Designed to follow Dr. Daniel Ling's speech program, Speech That Works includes everything you can't find any place else:

- suprasegmental objectives for duration, loudness, and pitch
- phonetic level exercises for vowels, single consonants, and clusters
- vowels from isolation to alternation, words and phrases
- clusters in order of motor difficulty
- phonologic objectives focused on morphological development rather than the typical pictures of nouns

An excellent educational tool for use with children who have hearing loss. It provides an accurate determination of the time a child has received quality auditory input. This one-page calculation sheet guides the professional through consideration of the many factors that can affect the child's access to auditory experiences and learning. As oral language and speech development reflect auditory input, the Listening Age Formula provides a powerful tool to compare the child's development of oral communication skills with the time that audition has been accessible. Important prognostic information can be realized through this comparison. Field-tested for four years. Detailed rationale and instructions are included with each packet of forms.
